

REGISTRATION FORM EDUCATION & WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT FORUM

AUGUST 18, 2015, EMBASSY SUITES, COLUMBIA

PRESENTED BY:

COMPETITIVENESS
AGENDA SERIES

If there's one lesson South Carolina has finally mastered, it's that when it comes to economic development, it's the indigenous workforce that makes or breaks a deal. Developing a highly-skilled and well-educated population is integral to increased job opportunities. States with the highest levels of educated citizens will have the advantage in attracting and creating jobs, improving the state's overall standard of living. South Carolina must start now, and the business community supports initiatives that will transform the current education system to achieve that goal. The private and public sectors must work together to ensure workforce needs are addressed.

Join us to hear from the State Superintendent of Education, SCDEW, university researchers and many more at this year's Education and Workforce Development Forum presented by Bank of America.
