2013 Legislative Scorecard &
YEAR IN REVIEW

BIPEC
While some may call the 2013 legislative year lackluster, the business community can claim a successful year as businesses came together to secure numerous victories for infrastructure funding, workforce development and economic development.

NO. 1 BUSINESS COMMUNITY PRIORITY RECEIVES SIGNIFICANT FUNDING

Infrastructure funding took a front seat throughout the legislative session, with a united business community driving the debate. In January, the South Carolina Chamber of Commerce and 14 allied organizations released the Road Map to the Future, a detailed plan for the General Assembly to begin addressing the state’s infrastructure funding needs through three major improvement areas: interstate expansion ($2.8 billion), bridges ($2 billion) and resurfacing ($1.2 billion). The plan included a statewide approach and did not raise a single tax or fee. In April, more than 100 businesses reiterated the importance in a letter to the General Assembly urging significant highway funding investment this year.

The House and Senate each passed infrastructure funding in their respective budgets. Once the conference committee met to work out the differences, the final proposal invested nearly $600 million in roads and bridges. This includes $50 million in recurring funds allocated to the State Infrastructure Bank (SIB) to be bonded for $500 million. The package also includes moving half of the sales tax on automobiles to the Highway Fund on a recurring basis, generating about $41 million annually. Additionally, $50 million in one time funds will be used for bridge repairs. Based on a study by the Associated General Contractors of America, over 16,000 jobs will be created and major economic thoroughfares will be fixed.

Of the final package, South Carolina Senate Majority Leader Harvey Peeler, said, “We had two goals with infrastructure reform this year – provide dedicated streams of revenue for our roads, and make sure our state was spending on ‘first things first,’ fixing the infrastructure we already have. This plan makes clear to South Carolinians that we’re serious about getting our roads in better shape.”

“I’m extremely pleased. I think it’s a major step in the right direction,” said South Carolina Senate Minority Leader Nikki Setzler. “Our roads are in such terrible shape, and we are so far behind. This won’t come anywhere close to solving the problem, but it will certainly make a dent in the problem.”

Governor Nikki Haley signed H.3360, the highway funding vehicle, at the South Carolina Chamber of Commerce. Governor Haley was joined by Transportation Secretary Robert St. Onge and business community leaders.

“We thank Governor Haley and the General Assembly for their leadership on investing in our roads. This is a great first step, and the South Carolina Chamber will continue to advocate for a comprehensive road funding plan that will spur job creation and put South Carolina at the forefront of economic development,” said Otis Rawl, president and CEO of the South Carolina Chamber of Commerce.

This is the first significant funding increase for roads and bridges since 1987, when there were one million fewer residents living in the state.

BUSINESSES WILL SAVE $650 MILLION

The Department of Employment and Workforce (DEW) Integrity bill, which was signed into law this year, will save South Carolina employers nearly $650 million annually. The bill enforces several federal mandates including penalties for employers who fail to adequately respond to DEW’s request for information on unemployment insurance claims where there is a dispute on benefit payments. Had the legislation not passed before October 2013, every South Carolina employer would have lost the entire FUTA credit, resulting in a $420 per employee tax increase.

In related news, the Senate confirmed Governor Nikki Haley’s nomination of Cheryl Stanton to lead DEW. Stanton is a former partner with the Ogletree Deakins law firm and helped lead the South Carolina Chamber’s lawsuit against the overreach of the National Labor Relations Board in federal district court. The Chamber supported her nomination to lead DEW and believes she will bring leadership and balance to rebuild the Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund and, more importantly, begin matching unemployed workers with available jobs.

PREPARING OUR WORKFORCE

The General Assembly allocated an additional $26 million for the expansion of 4 year-old kindergarten into an additional 17 high-poverty school districts, on top of the 37 school districts currently operating programs. Public schools will be allocated 65 percent of the funds, and private providers will receive 35 percent. The South Carolina Chamber has been a lead advocate for many years to expand 4-K education.

In response to deep concerns about the availability of skilled workers to fill manufacturing jobs, the South Carolina Chamber’s Manufacturers Steering Committee, in conjunction with the South Carolina Manufacturers Alliance and South Carolina Economic Developers’ Association supported a Manufacturing Skills Standard Council (MSSC) certificate program as the best common certification for beginning-level employees. The MSSC program was funded at $3.775 million and each of the 16 technical colleges will help administer the program.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Governor Nikki Haley signed a key priority of the business community, the High Growth Small Business Job Creation Act, known as “angel investments.” The South Carolina Chamber has included the legislation in the Competitiveness Agenda for several years because it is a mechanism for private investors to help start-up companies flourish. The final legislation includes a $5 million cap in tax credits and will sunset in six years. In addition to the South Carolina Chamber, the bill was also supported by the Upstate Chambers Coalition, the Charleston Metro Chamber, SCBIO and the Upstate Carolina Angel Network. The legislation has spurred economic opportunities in the more than 30 states that have already enacted angel investment credits.

Spurring further economic development, the port tax credit was amended in two meaningful ways. First, the credit recognizes a growing trend to enable third party logistics providers (3PLs) to gain access to the credit as an incentive to drive volumes through the South Carolina State Ports Authority (SCSPA). Many businesses are now using 3PLs in their business models. The credit also removes the $4 million cap on the employee withholdings tax, making the port tax credit much more attractive and enabling the SCSPA to better compete with other ports along the East Coast.

While both the House and Senate passed versions of a Department of Administration bill, S.22 currently remains stuck in conference committee. The bill is designed to expand executive control over day-to-day operations of state government. The major difference between the House and Senate versions includes which branch of government will handle state procurement. The Senate version creates a quasi Budget and Control Board, while the House version places that function under the executive branch.

For the second consecutive year, the House passed the Business Freedom to Choose Act, also known as flow control. The legislation prohibits local governments from enacting flow control ordinances and creating government-run monopolies for waste disposal. Currently, there are counties that are limiting private businesses’ ability to shop for the best pricing options for their business. Despite intense negotiations between the business community and local governments, the Senate failed to adopt numerous compromises offered on behalf of the business community.

Additionally, the business community has tried to work with local governments on the dire need to reform the business license fee process, including standardization across municipalities, reduction in complexities and implementation of a more fair appeals process. Thus far, municipalities have been unwilling to offer any such reforms and opposed H.3604, legislation that would have exempted out of state and international manufacturing sales from the business license fee calculation. The Chamber will continue to work with business partners and individual municipalities to find common ground on this key economic development issue.

After the environmental community failed to follow the 2012 compromise on the Pollution Control Act, House Agricultural and Natural Resources Chairman Nelson Hardwick introduced legislation to clarify that no private right of action exists under the Pollution Control Act and that entities cannot sue businesses over permits that are unobtainable. This legislation was approved in committee but was never considered by the full House.

Furthermore, legislation to eliminate the Department of Health & Environmental Control (DHEC) Board from the permit appeals process passed the House late in the session. The bill is intended to streamline the permitting process, eliminating up to 150 days that the Board could take to review and make a final determination on a permit. Over the last two years, the DHEC Board has only agreed to hear 10 contested permits. The Chamber is hopeful this legislation will advance in the Senate in 2014.

MEDICAID EXPANSION DEBATE LOOMS

There were numerous attempts in the House and Senate to expand Medicaid and accept matching federal dollars. The House and Senate both rejected these efforts, largely along partisan lines. The South Carolina Chamber did not take an official position this legislative session, but created a working group to continue to study other state proposals and reforms across the country. The Chamber is also committed to working with the South Carolina Hospital Association, the South Carolina Medical Association, the insurance industry and the S.C. Department of Health & Human Services to find a Medicaid reform package that will be a viable solution for South Carolina.

The mission of the South Carolina Chamber of Commerce, as the single, unified voice of business, is to enhance the quality of life for all South Carolinians. The infrastructure funding secured this year, improvement in workforce development opportunities and millions saved for businesses through government streamlining and tax credits will move us in the right direction.
2013 ADVOCACY RETURN ON INVESTMENT

Through the South Carolina Chamber of Commerce’s direct advocacy efforts at the State House and through strong business alliances with other industry trade associations, South Carolina businesses will benefit from more than $1.4 billion in legislative changes designed to make businesses more competitive and profitable.
